Clinical Points

- Prostate: Localized prostate carcinomas frequently are asymptomatic and diagnosis is suspected during a routine rectal exam.
- Colon: Colonoscopy has been found to be useful in making a differential diagnosis.
- Breast: Incidence increases with age. Screening should include clinical breast exam, instructing patients in BSE, and mammography for women over age 50.
- Lung: Cough, hemoptysis, wheeze and stidor, pneumonitis dyspnea from obstruction initial symptoms. Patients with all histologic types of cancer sometimes had microscopic residual disease. Ask your patient if they smoke and advise them 'to quit.
- Cervical: Third most frequent female cancer. Viral infection may play important role in development of disease. Purpose of cytologic screening (Pap Smear) is to prevent invasive cervical cancer.
