FoCaS

FoCaS is the Forsyth County Cancer Screening Project led by Reynolds Health Center and the Bowman Gray School of Medicine. This project is for women over the age of 40 who live in housing communities in Winston-Salem, North Carolina. The ultimate goal of the study is to improve knowledge and attitudes about cancer screening among low-income minority women and to increase the use of early detection procedures in these women. Another goal of this project is to determine why women in our target group do not use cancer screening procedures and to improve follow-up for recommendations following abnormal findings.

Your help is needed because these women view their special relationships with God and the church as a factor in the decisions they make. We would like to come together for a luncheon to ask for your suggestions, advice and leadership to help low-income, minority women and increase their awareness of cancer and its related problems.

Please join us for Lunch!

Door prizes will be awarded!

The Staff and Community Advisory Board of the FoCaS Project
